Poetry.

Absence.

BY LUCY S. D. LEADBEATTER.

I miss thee ever when the evening hour
Comes with its sober shade of twilight gray,
And when the stars of heaven assert their power,
'Tis for thy presence, that I watch and pray.

'Tis then I miss thee, canst thou ask me when
I do not pine for thee? Thy presence gleams
Along my daily path where'er I stray,
And through the misty shadow of my dreams.

Saith a deep pleading measure hath thy voice,
I muse upon it like remembered chords;
E'en as lute music makes the heart rejoice
So comes the haunting witchery of thy words.

And like the swells of some cathedral tone,
That ever through the arches plaintive go;
So the sad spirit of my thought alone,
In search of thee is wand'ring to and fro.

Selected Story.

What Everyone Thought.

Many have their own opinions and adhere to them, right or wrong; while others have no particular mind of their own, but are wholly or in part influenced by what they hear and see. So universally is this the case that it is a comparatively rare thing to find a whole community agreeing upon the same point. Yet as a whole everyone did think the same regarding Herbert Medbury. There were a few exceptions, to be sure; but then these were of so little account that they were not weighed of themselves.

I shall not tell which side I belonged to, for I am a very prudent individual. I have had the reputation of belonging to no side on any subject, until I was very sure which would have the majority, after which I came out boldly and said I always had favored it. But I deny it. Such a slanderer is beneath my notice as a free thinking man. Were I a policeman, the case would be very different, and I should keep very dark, until I was perfectly sure which would be the victorious party, and then throw my banner fearlessly to the breeze, and do my utmost to oppose the other side.

But where am I? I began to talk about Herbert Medbury, and had gone so far as to say that everyone had the same opinion regarding him. Everyone thought that if ever a young man with everything in his favor would turn out to be honored and respected in after life, this one would.

The opinion was based upon the fact that Herbert was a young man of rare ability, who had just graduated from college with high honors; was handsome and well formed; and the son of the most prominent merchant in the town.

Certainly there was a good deal to base such an opinion upon; and it seemed foolishness in a few who, shaking their heads with a very knowing air; said "he would come to no good."

Herbert seemed unconscious of all remarks, and evidently cared very little for what people thought. He was very independent in thought, word, and action; so much so that one would never suspect that he was only a little over twenty-two when he left college. Few develope as rapidly as did he, and he naturally took a leading position among the younger class of people with whom he had grown up.

Many complained that Herbert was inclined to be moody, and that it would be impossible to tell what he would be the next hour. But this was never laid up against him; and as he had nothing whatever to trouble his mind, everyone agreed in thinking that he was occupied by plans of a brilliant future.

Now, having sufficiently introduced Herbert Medbury, I must also bring to notice another young man of different character. This person Sylvester Goodale was by no means conspicuous in any respect. Most people said that his upper story had been 'to let' ever since he was born, but "could never get a tenant;" they moreover said that he had no particular ability for anything, and would drag through life unnoticed, and die unthought of.

Now, in this case I have something to say; for I believe in bringing out all the good I can in everyone. I did not think about Sylvester as everyone thought, nor did I ever countenance the nick-name which his name suggested, and which was thought so appropriate and witty—that of "Silly." I always looked upon him as a good-natured young man, who never had been able to receive an education, as he belonged to a poor family, who could not afford to send him to school. But I will confess that I always observed that he had not much taste for reading or study. Yet he was good at work, and would always do exactly what he was told, asking no questions.

He was about Herbert's age; and strange to say the latter always seemed to take more or less fancy to him. I have observed Herbert look thoughtfully upon his less fortunate friend for a very long time, and then an expression would come over his face which at that time I never understood.

Soon after Herbert's graduation Mr. Medbury died, leaving an extensive business, in the best condition, to his son's care. The latter, of course, having very little experience, was obliged to rely greatly upon that of the clerks, who had so long been employed; but in all things he directed, and made many changes which were considered much for the worse by those interested in the establishment as it was.

Among other "freaks," as they were called, he took Sylvester Goodale into his store, and made him a confidential clerk. In this move he was not so much condemned, as people said Sylvester would do just as he was told; was perfectly honest and reliable in a position which any other person would in time take advantage of and make a way for himself.

As time wore on Herbert became convinced that he had not a taste for this quiet kind of life; and began to grow restless under it. He was ambitious and believed that he could rise faster than he was doing, and make a name for himself beyond his present limits. This thought expanded until he determined to travel about and see how best he could extend his business and name.

Calling Sylvester into his private office one morning, he told his plan, at the same time giving the charge of the establishment into his clerk's care, with definate directions as to all of its management with which he was not already acquainted.

When this became publicly known, everyone said they feared Mr. Medbury had made a sad mistake, and his luxuries would be missed; but Herbert laughed at them, saying that he "knew his man well;" and people then began to believe him, for it was hard to entertain any other opinion than that they always had—that he would be a prosperous man!

Everything being arranged Herbert Medbury sailed for Europe. For some months a regular correspondence was kept up between him and Sylvester regarding the business, when suddenly Herbert ceased to write, and for a long time not a word was received from him in any way, until the faithful clerk began to fear something had happened. Nevertheless, he kept on just the same, true to his directions in everything. Many emergencies arose to puzzle him, but with the advice and assistance of others he continued on, and the business, while it did not grow any, yet did not seriously fall away. He had some trouble with other clerks, but had sufficent power to hold his own position through all.

Herbert Medbury had been away about a year, when a stranger arrived in town and presented himself to Sylvester.

"Is this Mr. Goodale?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"I am happy to meet you, Mr. Goodale. My name is Philipps, of whom you have heard so much in Mr. Medbury's letters. I am his foreign partner. I left Herbert in Berlin, and am now going to Rio Janero to establish a branch house, as we have learned there are extraordinary inducements there."

Sylvester gazed at the easy, good looking stranger thoughtfully and suspiciously, and replied, nervously:

"I have not heard from Mr. Medbury for over four months; so I know nothing about you."

"What do you tell me?" replied the other. "Not heard from him! Why he has written and told you of our co-partnership; also that you might expect me!"

"This is the first I knew of it," said Sylvester, suspiciously, still. "You do not look nor speak like a foreigner."

"Nor am I," said the other. "I am a native of this country, and was a friend of Medbury in college. We met recently abroad, and as I have large business interests we concluded to unite our fortunes."

Sylvester began to get very uneasy. At last a bright idea struck him, and he exclaimed:

"I should have thought Mr. Medbury would have given you letters to me of some kind under such circumstances! How am I to know whether you are a rogue or not?"

"You are right," rejoined Phillips. "I have a letter; but supposihg you knew all about me, I forgot it. Here it is." And he produced it.

"That seems to be his writing fast enough," said Sylvester, when he had read the letter of introduction.

"Then we are all right, are we?" asked Phillips.

"Excuse me," said the clerk, turning very red, "but—but—"

"But what? Speak out!"

"I mean no offense, sir. But I hope this is not a forgery. I beg pardon, sir."

"I like you all the better for your distrust," replied the stranger, smiling quietly. "Medbury could not have left a better young man in charge of his establishment. But I trust that you will take my word of honor that this letter and myself are in every way correct."

"Well sir," said the clerk now yielding as he saw his arguments and suspicions were of no avail, and could think of no others to bring forward, "I recognize you. Will you tell me about Mr. Medbury, and what your wishes are in regard to the business here?"

"Yes I left him about two months ago, as I said, and have been in France and England since. He was to go to Russia and then return home, while I was to precede him here, and after looking out for your welfare, go to South America. I am astonished that you have missed some of his letters! I wonder what can be the reason!"

Both sat musing for some time, Goodale furtively eying the new partner, and in great doubt about him, or what he should do. But he could see no reason why he should not receive him fully, and finally made up his mind to do so without further concern.

Mr. Phillips remained some time, and looked into the accounts, then went out, promising to return in the morning.

The next day he reappeared, and as Sylvester again narrowly observed him, the impression was not a good one; yet he tried to banish it, and put away distrust.

"I think I shall start on my journey this afternoon," said Mr. Phillips, "I see the concern is in funds. I shall wish to take a considerable amount of money with me, and will draw on you afterwards as I need it."

Saying this he filled out a check for a very large sum, and put it in his pocket.

Sylvester's first impulse was to stop him. He was really frightened; but he restrained himself.

Shortly after, Mr. Phillips bade him goodbye and left the store, while the bewildered clerk sat motionless, not knowing whether he had done right or wrong. At last a vague idea posessed him to recover the money. He went to the bank, and found the check had been cashed. He tried to find the new partner, but every effort was unsuccessful; he had evidently left town.

"Why, of course it must be all right," he reasoned, when he got back to the counting room. "That was Mr. Medbury's writing. Yet it might be a forgery," he added, as he remembered something in the stranger's eye which was unpleasant, and which he could not quite trust.

A month elapsed, and reports arrived in town that a prominent young man of that place who had been in Europe about a year, was leading a very fast life in Geneva, giving himself up to every kind of dispipation.

Who could it be? Everyone thought of Herbert Medbury, but banished the idea as soon as it occurred. Still the reports came stronger and stronger, and Herbert seemed the only one who answered the description. At the same time a heavy draft came upon Sylvester from Paris bankers, to such an amount that the faithful clerk began to fear it must be true, notwithstanding everyone still said, though not so confidently: No no; it could not be Herbert. It was not like him."

During all this time Sylvester had faithfully sent letters to the Paris bankers, as he had been directed, but received nothing in any way from his employer. He heard nothing either from Mr. Philips, and began to fear something was wrong in that direction. He began to worry exceedingly. Most of the old clerks who had been with him and helped him on, had left for better positions, and his own knowledge was not always to any unusual emergency. He began to grow very nervous; at times scarcely knowing what he was about. His appetite failed him, and his position was truly alarming to his friends. But what was to be done? He could not leave his post, and it was evident that he could not remain at it much longer, for his health was failing.

One night during this unhappy state of affairs, Sylvester sat alone in his counting room, trying in vain to settle up some accounts which he had put by from the day's work. It was late in the evening, and the store was closed, save the front door had not been locked. The poor young man finally leaned his head down upon his desk, and indulged his gloomy thoughts for a time; then rousing himself, he exclaimed:

"I must and will be faithful to him! I am worried almost to death about that swindler, Philips; but of course it was natural I should be taken in. They call me 'Silly,' and I believe that is a light name compared with what I deserve. If Mr. Medbury ever does come back I can never make it up to him; but he shall have the service of what little of my life may be left."

Here he was suddenly brought to his feet by the street door being pushed violently open. He rushed out, but it was only a policeman, who had tried it on his nightly round and was not prepared to find it yield; so he had stumbled in himself. Sylvester locked it, and being thoroughly awake again, returned to his work.

Steadily he went over the figures for some time, when he was again startled by a slight noise, and looking up hastily was confronted by a stout, fierce man, who bowed to him with mocking politeness.

Sylvester who had grown weak and nervous, was frightened, but he managed to say:

"Who are you? What do you want?"

"My friend," replied the other, drawing nearer, "I want to talk to you. In the first place, allow me to inquire after your health. It is good, I hope, though you don't look strong!"

"Where did you come from?" gasped Sylvester.

"My friend, you are very inquisitive," said the rough man. "But I will gratify you. I came in at the door before you locked it the last time; and as you have the key I cannot well go out until you unlock it."

"Will you go then?"

"After first having transacted a little business with you. I will condescend to explain. You see I am vulgarly called a burglar—unpleasant name isn't it? I see you shudder—and I will make one of you if you like. You are a small man, and therefore completely in my power; one blow of my little finger would lay you gently on the floor. Now, if I am a burglar, I am also a gentleman, and should hate to do so ungentlemanly a deed. So I have a proposition to make. You can assist me in my business to-night, and advance it very much. You can direct me to the money and valuables, after which I will, leave quietly. Now, what do you say to that?"

"I say I will die first," replied the clerk, in a firm voice; and beginning to move off so as to lay hold of something wherewith to defend himself.

"Then I can accomodate you," replied the robber, with the utmost politeness. "An unpleasant thing to do; but I have done such things before, and can do them again. What kind of a treatment would you prefer?"

"This!" shouted a deep voice, and in an instant the man lay stretched out on the floor from a powerful blow upon the head.

Sylvester cried out and almost fainted as he saw Herbert Medbury standing before him, in all the beauty of perfect health.

"Run for an officer," he said. "I'll stay here and knock the villain down if he revives."

The officer arrived and carried off the man, after which Mr. Medbury and clerk sat down to converse.

The former began by saying: "I suppose you wonder how I got in here. I found out you were here, and so stole in by the door you left unlocked. I confess to you that my object was to observe what you were doing, and see if you were faithful to me. I had been in but a few moments when the door softly opened, and this burgler crept in and secreted himself. I did not at first quite understand the case, but watched until I saw my services were needed in a forcible way, and I rendered them in time to save a very faithful guardian of my interest.

I have just arrived home to-night, and will give you a brief account of my travels, more than what my letters contained, and tell all more fully at some future time."

"First", interrupted; "let me ask you a question, to ease my mind. Do you know a Mr. Philips? Is he really your partner, or a swindler?" Herbert smiled as he answered: "He is my partner, and no swindler. Why do you ask?"

"Because I have never felt very easy about him. I knew your hand-writing, but it might have been forged; and as I received no word about him from you, I was in much doubt. He came to play a sort of spy on me then!"

"Oh, no; he lives not far from here; besides, he wished to see the establishment. But what do you mean about not hearing from me? You spoke of it in your letters. When did you get my last letter?

"About six months ago."

"Whew! where can they be? I have written to you a dozen times. I don't understand it. I have traveled much and accomplished a great deal. This concern is destined to become one of the greatest in the country. But I will postpone telling you details, as they are not important at present."

"Do not be offended," said Sylvester, in a hesitating manner. "Another thing has been a great weight upon my mind; but I can see the reports about you are not true."

"I dont understand you. What reports?

"It is reported that you have been very much given to dissipation abroad."

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Herbert, "is it? Well, I hardly think people need trouble themselves. Do I look very badly off?"

Why no. You could not look better."

"Now, let's talk a little business, and then go home. You have worked enough."

The two men remained in conversation half an hour longer; then separated with light hearts, both very much relieved, though in different ways.

A FEW PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

In the "days gone bye" North Carolina was comfortable, and a majority of her people contented. But in the height of her happiness a storm came and swept away almost all she had accumulated in ages. And when the winds and the waters subsided, the wreck that was left was a sad one indeed. The old State was stripped, wounded, lame, prostrate. Her surviving sons had their energies, their intelligence and experience, and little else, remaining with which to begin anew. They put their shoulder to the wheel resolutely; here and there over the South, and especially here in the East, immigrants of capital and energy have located, and together they are raising the good old North State from her desolation and depression, vivifying her industries, pouring the balsam of hope into her bleeding heart, and directing her ambition to higher prizes in the world's national lists.

But, with all this, there is unfortunately still a lingering leaven of old thoughts and theories, old traditions, old habits, old customs, and old prejudices, that impede true progress. They are as barnacles on the bottom of a ship retarding her speed. All over the State we have young men and old men who are abreast of the times; who appreciate the circumstances that surround us; who have learned practical lessons in misfortune, and who are straining every muscle, every nerve, and every sinue to improve every resource and utilize every advantage within the bounds of the commonwealth. But there are also others, young men as well as old men, who do not, and, it seems, will not embrace in a broad, bold comprehension of our great interests of our State; men who have turned their backs upon the future and their faces to the past; who would sit among ruins and sigh their lives away; who refuse to be taught by experience; who look listlessly upon the modern world as it rushes by them. They want to go back because they were happy in the past, forgetting that it is impossible to undo what has been done. They refuse to move forward, when the future alone holds out to them the hope of prosperity and happiness.

And it is this class who like catapillars dry up the succulence of the trees to which they cling, are opposing the railroad. Like the fisherman on the banks of the Newbegun they want to be undisturbed in their seclusion and to be allowed to lazily sit on their "logs." The idea of the life and activity, following in the train of the Iron Horse, is repugnant to them and the scream of the locomotive would fill them with horror. But the first will come, and the whistle of the latter will be heard. Old fogyism cannot prevent it.

THE WEST OR THE SOUTH.

By our Northern and Eastern exchanges we see an increasing feeling being aroused in these States in regard to the relative advantages which are offered to the surplus population of these actions, which are over crowded, and are ever sending forth their son to seek omes where their labors are more likely to meet with a reward than is to be found on their native hills and valleys. The numerous publications which are being made in the journals of the day, are being heeded, as to the superior advantages of the genial climate of the South, where work is suspended for less than two months in winter, and where the land is capable of recuperation by judicious culture, and made to produce, beside most of the valuable money crops of the country, a great variety of others which cannot be raised at the North or the West—whilst in the latter, as was the case the last year, the cold weather suspends all out-door operations for six months in the year. We annex with much pleasure the following editorial from that staunch old agricultural journal, the Massachusetts PLOUGHMAN, showing the change which is going on in that quarter as to the direction which immigration should take—the remarks were made introductory to a letter from North Carolina, detailing the advantages of our State for intelligent farmers of small capital:—

"It is a some what curious historical fact, that emigration has generally settled down upon very nearly the same parallel of latitude from which it started. Exceptions, of course, occur, but they are not numerous enough to militate against the general law. The people from the East have naturally been inclined to settle in the West, and the tide is still setting that way, the growth and increase of some of the Western States being quite astonishing to say the least.

"Perhaps if an Eastern man were asked to give a reason for a preference for the West, he would be likely to say that he did not like the hot and wilting climate of the South. The climate in the same latitude, though somewhat different, according to local circumstances, from that to which he was accustomed, could not make a radical change for him. This idea, together with the fertile and cheap lands of the West, has prevailed to such an extent as to determine the general tide of emigration, and the West has therefore grown and prospered, while the South has generally been avoided.

"But there are localities in the South where even the difference in climate would not be very radical, and we are surprised that North Carolina, has not attracted greater attention and secured a larger proportion of intelligent and thrifty and enterprising emigrants from the East. Though we cannot pretend to judge from careful personal observation, our impressions have always been in the highest degree favorable to North Carolina as a most delightful climate and a most desirable region for farming.

Let us once have a railroad and immigration of the kind we need will speedily come.

Crispinism, the combination of shoemakers in Massachusetts, is reported as dead. It died of politics and of attempting to interfere in the business of others, prescribing prices, and so bidding employers to take apprentices. "Live and let live" is a good motto; and when people attempt to bondit themselves by dictating to others how to manage their business, they get the worst of it.

The telegraph is to be utilized in the good work of furnishing the true time, every day at 12 noon. The Observatory at Washington being the regulator, the noon instant is to be indicated by it to New York and thence to the principal stations over the country. This will be of immense value to railroads and many branches of business, as well as of interest to all.

The Republicans of Virginia have nominated Col. ROBERT W. HUGHES, for Governor. He is one of the ablest men in the State and is very popular. It is more than probable that he will be elected. He ought to be.

A Letter from Pennsylvania—The Advantages of a Railroad.

Coatesville, Pa., }
July 29, 1873. }

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

I am surprized to see by your paper that there should be any person in Pasquotank County opposed to subscribing the small sum of forty thousand dollars to the stock of a railroad that will increase the value of all property very largely. It has done so in other places. Take for instance New Jersey before railroads were made. In 1830 before the Camden and Amboy railroad was built, land was very low in the vicinity of the rout of the road. I know one man who bought large quantities at 50 cents per acre. He owned about six miles along, or in the neighborhood of the line of the road, and a large amount of it was bought at 50 cents per acre. To-day the whole of it would bring from one hundred to one thousand dollars per acre.

At that time New Jersey was considered about the poorest place in the country. It was scarcely acknowledged to be in the United States. To-day it stands equal to any State in the Union as regards prosperity and the value of its lands. What has made it so but the railroads that have been made through her territory? I know of no railroad made there that when completed did not increase the value of land along the rout and for a considerable distance on each side from fifteen to twenty-five dollars per acre. The same will hold good as far as I am acquainted with this neighborhood. I know of land between here and Philadelphia that in 1850 could be bought for from thirty to eighty dollars per acre, that is selling now at not thousand dollars per acre, in consequence of the railroad facilities. People doing business in Phila. can live in the country with their families and be in the city by 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning. One of my neighbors here, 40 miles from Philadelphia keeps his family here Summer and Winter. His business is in the city. He leaves here at 7 in the morning and is in the city at 9 o'clock.

You have been making strong efforts to get immigration to your county. You cannot succeed until you get a railroad. I have visited Elizabeth City frequently and would again, but when I arrive at Portsmouth I feel as if I was at the "jumping off place," and this is about the view all persons take who are accustomed to railroad accommodations.

Very respectfully yours,
WM. DRIPPS.

From Hot Springs Va.

July 24th, 1873.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

As a resident of your county and a patron of your paper, I concluded to drop you a few lines and give you and your many readers a sketch of my visit to this "pleasant locality." I left Rose Dale, my native home, on Monday July 21st, arrived in Norfolk at 6 P. M. same day, Tuesday morning I took the cars on the Norfolk and Petersburg Railroad, arrived in Richmond at 1 P. M. same day; I remained in Richmond until 10 o'clock at night, I again mounted the iron horse, and moved off at the rate of 30 miles to the hour, traveling at night until next day at 7 A. M. when we were at Covington where we took the stage to the "Hot Springs," arriving here at 1 P. M.; the location is a most magnificent one, it is situated in the beautiful valey that lies at the western base of the Warm Springs Mountain. It is in the celebrated "Spring Region" being 35 miles from the White Sulphur, 50 from the Old Sweet, 27 from Rock Bridge Alum 5 from the Warm and 3 from the Healing.

CLIMATE AND SCENERY.

The Warm Springs Valley presents certain peculiarities of formation which greatly enhanced the beauties of its scenery and contribute to the well known salubrity of its climate. The climate in summer is delicious, the thermometer seldom rises higher than 75° F. in the hottest days and the nights are always cool and refreshing. Fogs which occur in other sections are seldom ever seen here; the surrounding heights of the Warm Springs mountain attain in many places an elevation of nearly two thousand five hundred feet above the level of the sea, so we are informed by the Manager. The hotel accomodations are adequate to accomodate 800 people; there are already over four hundred arrived, from all parts of the Union; old, young, male and female. The Baths are the next to notice, which are quite numerous. There is the Boiler bath, Sulphur bath, Hot Spout bath, Mud bath, Octagon bath, Warm bath, Ladies Pleasure bath, Gentlemen's Pleasure bath, &c., &c. To sum up the whole, 'tis a grand and noble scenery; being the garden spot of this Union. I am here for the season, unless necessarily called off.

A Letter from Winton.

Winton N. C., }
July 28, 1873. }

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

SIR:—I am very anxious that your paper shall have a fair show in this county. Hertford county is a live place, particularly the town of Winton, the county seat. Thinking that you would like to hear something from this section, I will give you a brief article.

Winton is a small place, having been entirely destroyed by the misfortunes of war. At present we have seven flourishing stores, a Post Office, two lawyers offices, two fine steam mills, and a grist mill. It is a place of improvement and bids fair to make one of the briskests little towns in the State. Col. John W. Faison is a lively merchant and sends things ahead. Winton is situated on the Chowan River, convenient to all boats passing, and is provided with two Hotels and can accomodate at least from three to five hundred persons. Winton is quite a point for shipping. This season she has shipped 5000 bales of cotton, 500 pounds to the bale, and seven millions feet of lumber. Each week from 5 to 6 Steamers, Barges and sail vessels load at Winton for Washington D. C., and Georgetown.

A Letter from Boston.

Boston, July 29, 1873.

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

We are now melting in dog day weather. Its sweats and moistens everything, and people feel like dripping rags good for nothing. It is useful to get enough discipline in this life; to come short makes us arrogant, and dog days inflicts its appointed share of it; but like all else in the plan of Nature, it has its offsets—food for man and beast ripens on the earth, fish in the sea multiply whether man is too hot or too cold. This is comfortable—in philosophy at least. The country North and South is rapidly accumulating wealth, through its conditions, namely, labor. The South is doing splendidly. In a few years, her condition will be solid and enduring in its results it is hoped. Her experience is as under a sharp master, but fruitful in its results.

W. S.

More than half the population of Mount Vernon, Ind., have left the place on account of the cholera scourge. No business has been transacted there for several days, and the city has a deserted and gloomy appearance. Physicians have arrived from several of the surrounding towns, and are rendering all the assistance in their power. Among the deaths are Dr. Matzedorff, a young German physician, who since the appearance of the epidemic has been most active in his efforts in behalf of the sick and dying, and a man with his two daughters, the last but one of a family of 10 who died of the disease. An appeal has been made for physicians and nurses, those already there being overworked.

We read of a young school-mistress in Ohio, who being like unto the icicles which hang on Dian's temple, though extremely handsome, is vowed to Minerva and the spelling books. Being much embarrassed on her way to and from her academy by the admiring young men of the vicinage, and not being able to hire a lion to ride upon, she has trained a faithful Tray to guard her. this sagacious dog knows what is meant when he sees a juvenile gentleman in his Sunday clothes waving a pocket handkerchief, and the too ardent wooer is sure to be bitten and knawed. Forty mistaken Endymions have already been lacerated.

A recent widow in Beth, Eng., distinguished herself by her demonstrations of grief for her husband. She tore the shroud from the corpse and tried to pour rum down its throat. She delayed the funeral procession by sitting on the coffin and refusing to have it removed. The united strength of three men was necessary to keep her from jumping into the grave after the coffin. One is curious to know how long this woman had been married. The deceased was a tailor, but the proverb must be false. No ninth part of a man was ever so mourned for by any widow.

Dublin, Va., July 22nd. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd, a bridal couple from Montgomery County, on their way to Pulaski Alum Springs, while crossing Cloyd,s Mountain in a buggy, the horse took fright and ran over a precipice 170 feet high. A tree on the way saved them from going to the bottom. The bride had her collar-bone and ancle dislocated, her teeth knocked out, and she was otherwise badly injured. The groom was also severly bruised.

That Favorite Home Remedy,

PAIN-KILLER.

Has been before the public over THIRTY YEARS, and probably has a wider and better reputation than any other proprietary medicine of the present day. At this period there are but few unacquainted with the merits of PAIN-KILLER; but, while some extol it as a liniament, they know but little of its power in easing pain when taken internally; while others use it internally with great success, but are equally ignorant of its healing virtues when applied externally. We therefore wish to say to all, that it is equally successful, whether used internally or externally.

It is sufficient, evidence of its virtues as a standard medicine to know that it is now used in all parts of the world, and that its sale is constantly increasing. No curative agent has had such a wide spread sale or given such universal satisfaction.

DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER is a purely vegetable compound, prepared from the best and purest materials, and with a care that, insures the most perfect uniformity in the medicine; and while it is a most effective remedy for pain, it is a perfectly safe medicine, even in the most unskilful hands.

After over thirty years trial, it is still receiving the most unqualified testimonials to its virtues, from persons of the highest character and responsibility. Eminent Physicians commend it as a most effectual preparation for the extinction of pain. It is not only the best remedy ever known for Bruises, Cuts, Burns, &c., but for Dysentery, or Cholera, or any sort of bowel complaint, it is a remedy unsurpassed for efficiency, and rapidity of action. In the great cities of India, and other hot climates, it has become the standard medicine for all such complaints, as well as for Dyspepsia. Liver Coplaints, and all other kindred disorders. For Coughs and Colds, Canker, Asthama, and Rheumatic difficulties, it has been proved by the most abundant and convincing testimony to be an invaluable medicine.

We would caution the public against all imitations of our preparation, either in name, or style of putting up.

☞Business men! Do you want more trade—an increase of business? If so vote for the railroad.

☞L. BURWELL, Esq., of Ontario, Canada, will accept our thanks for Toronto papers.

☞We request our friends in Perquimans and Chowan to send us the result of the vote at once on the Railroad question.

☞A friend of ours says he is reminded of the paraphase that tells us that "in the midst of life we are in debt."

☞A cotemporary observes that all sorts of notes from watering places are current, but the only notes that are taken at these places are greenbacks.

☞Our townsman GEO. W. BAKER, Proprietor of the Camden Mills, has renovated and very much improved the same. He is an enterprizing man.

☞Feline concerts of the first order are given every night in certain parts of town. The different troupes seem to be consolidating, and are doubtless training for a grand ovation.

☞Dr. R. K. SPEED, Past Master and Past Junior Grand Warden, will deliver a Masonic Address in the Hall of the Lodge at this place this evening. All the members of the fraternity are invited to attend.

☞The Republicans of Nixonton Township have appointed the following Executive Committee: THOS. J. MURDEN, WILLIS MORRIS and JOHN CARTWRIGHT. In Salem FRANK GODFREY Esq. is the Chairman.

☞At the meeting of the City Commissioners on Monday evening JOHN T. PRICE was elected to act as Mayor pro tem during the absence of the Mayor elect. Mr. PRICE is a worthy young man and will make a good officer.

☞HENRY WHITE Esq., having resigned his position as Sheriff of Perquimans County, the Commissionioners at their meeting on Monday, appointed JESSE C. JACOCKS Esq., to fill the vacancy. He will doubtless make a good and efficient officer.

☞A colored lad named TROTMAN SKINNER, was drowned in the River near Browers brick yard, at this place on Thursday last while in bathing. An inquest was held and the verdict was "Death caused by accidental drowning." He was in his fifteenth year of age.

☞We are requested to say that there will be a trot on the "Albemarle Park" on Friday evening next. The fast Nags are "Grecian Bend," E. D. THOMAS, from Newberne, N. C., "Elizabeth City Joe," J. M. BUNNEL and "Gray Hawk," F. D. BUNNEL Jr., both of Elizabeth City.

☞The Republican Convention for Elizabeth City township was held in the Court House on Friday evening last. The proceedings will be found elsewhere. Entire harmony and the utmost good feeling prevailed. The ticket will be found at our mast head.

☞We are not a prophet, but we make a prediction nevertheless. If the railroad subscriptions are voted to-morrow in these three counties and the road is built, as it will be, there are very few that vote against it that five years hence will be willing to own that they did so.

☞Sheriff BELL, of Bertie County, has written a letter to Governor CALDWELL, informing him of the fact that one DENNIS BROWN and one BEN. SMALWOOD escaped from the jail of that county and is now at large. On the night of the 23rd they went to the house of a colored man, called him out and shot him down.

☞We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of the Wesleyan Female College at Murfresboro, N. C. The school, the location, the building, the educational facilities, the government and the terms are all of a character commending the institution to the favorable notice and patronage of the people of this District. We enjoy the acquaintance of the President and know him to be a man of fine acquirements and great ability.

☞Old RIP VAN WINKLE has found his level at last. As an editor he fizzled out: as a political prophet he was a failure; as a clown he was hissed off the stage. Mortified and mad, he yielded to his instincts and rapidly gravitated down—down to blackguardism. For the first time in his checkered career he is a success. More in pity than in anger we now "let him slide."

☞To silence the clamor of the anti-railroad men about the "stealing" of the County Bonds, and to show that the Company mean business and good faith, the President, Mr. HULBURT, requested our County Commissioners to issue the following order, which they did:

1st. If the voters of Pasquotank County approve of the proposed subscription to the Railroad no bonds shall be issued or delivered until the road has been graded and cross tied through the entire length of Pasquotank county as surveyed, and then not more than one half of the subscription.

2nd. That no further issue be made until the road has been completed, equipped and the cars are running on said road.

☞The Commissioners of Camden, at their meeting on Monday, rescinded their order of submitting the railroad subscription to a vote of the people. They—a majority of them—became alarmed as the day of election approached and were afraid to trust the people. To justify their action a story was trumped up that the voters were being corrupted! This is an insult to them and one that will be remembered. We believe that a majority of the people of Camden are to-day in favor of the measure, and that it was this conviction that influenced the arbitrary action to deprive them of a voice at the ballot box. People of Camden! are you to be gagged upon any question, and especially upon one of so much interest and importance to you and your children as this one? Remember the men who thus insult you by saying that you are not to be trusted.

☞Since our last issue the President and another of the Directors of the "Atlantic Coast Railway Company," have arrived and are spending some time among our people. The President, Hon. H. R. HULBERT, is a gentleman whose reputation is a national one. For a number of years he was the Comptroller of the Currency. His courteous manners and gentlemanly bearing impress our people most favorably. He has become officially and pecuniarily interested in the Company because, after a full and thorough investigation, he has become convinced that as a business enterprize this Road will, when completed, be a paying one. He is accompanied by ARTHUR HOLMES, Esq., of Courtlandt N. Y., a prominent member of the New York Bar, an ex-member of the Legislature of that State and a gentleman of large practical business experience. He made a speech at Camden, on Saturday which was well received. He is a man of more than ordinary ability, and has spent some time during the past year in this State and Virginia. He has become acquainted with the condition and wants of our section and is satisfied, as we are, that a Railroad is the agency by which we may be enabled to help ourselves and become what nature evidently designed we should be, a prosperous and happy people.

☞When one of the anti railroad orators in his speech at Salem on Thursday last began to speak of "a newspaper man" we did not know but he was addressing himself to us. We thought it a little strange as the NORTH CAROLINIAN had always taken a pride in referring to him as a man well read in the law, of unspotted private and public character and as an honest judge; nay more, even on this railroad question it had spoken of him courtecously and kindly, in the very language he publicly applies to his opponents, "honestly deceived," but when he wound up by saying "one TURNER at Raleigh"—"a newspaper man" who for years had allowed no occasion to pass without heaping contumely and abuse upon his Honor, we understood it all. It was JOE TURNER—the Pariah of the North Carolina press—and not our humble self against whom the thunders of defiance were hurled. We have had some experience as the conductor of a newspaper and we appreciate its responsibilities and work. As a journalist we have a grave duty to perform and we never shrink from it. When the public interest demands it, neither men nor personal feelings can influence us in our strictures or criticism. We sometimes indulge in plain, Anglo Saxon speech it is true, but we always endeavor to be fair and just, and never condescend to "abuse" any man. It is only the "newspaper men" of the TURNER tribe that prostitute their columns in this way, and certainly the distinguished orator has had just cause for exhibiting some feeling on the subject.

LOCAL PORT-FOLIO.

All would like to be druggists—when money becomes a "drug" in the market. Afraid of the people—some of the anti-railroad men. Amusing—to see Rip Van Winkle holding on to the coat tail of Progress and screaming "whoa," "whoa!"

We learn says the Raleigh News that the Executive Committee of the State Educational Association have determined to issue a monthly periodical, to be known as the Educational Journal, which, as the organ of the Association, will be devoted to the educational interests of the State. We wish the movement a permanent success.

No one yet has been able to analyze or demonstrate the essential action of perfume. Gas can be weighed, but not scents; the smallest known creatures—the very monads of life—can be caught by microscopic lens and made to deliver up the secrets of their organization; but what it is that emanates from the pouch of the musk deer that fills a whole space for years and years with its penetrating odor—an odor which an illimitable number of extraneous substances can carry off without diminishing it in size and weight, and what it is that the warm summer air brings us from the flowers, no man has yet been able to determine.

THE WEAR AND TEAR OF LIFE—The cares, anxieties and misfortunes of life have as much to do with shortning it as disease. They are in fact the source of many maladies and physical disabilities.

Nervous weakness, dyspepsia, affections of the liver, disturbances of the bowels, headache, hypochondria and monomania are among these distressing traits. It is, therefore, of great importance that persons whose minds are op pressed with heavy business responsibilities, or harassed by family troubles, or excited by speculation, or perplexed by a multiplicity of enterprises or in any way overtaxed or over worked should keep up their stamina by the daily use of a wholesome tonic. Thousands of persons thus circumstanced are enabled to bear up against the difficulty in which they are involved and to retain their strength, health and mental clearness, by the regular use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Diseases which are prone to attack the body when debilitated and broken down by over-much brain work or exhausting physical labor, are kept at bay by the resistant power with which this incomparable tonic endows the nervous system and the vital organs. At this season, when the heat is evaporating the elements of strength from every pore, an invigorant is absolutely essential to the safety and comfort of the public, and it is required by even the most robust if they desire to keep their athletic capabilities in status quo. Hence a course of Hostetter's Bitters is particularly useful at this period of the year as a defense against invisible disease afloat in a sultry atmosphere. It is the most potent of all preventative medicines and for all complaints which affect the stomach the liver and the bowels, and interfere digestion and a assimilation of food it is the standard remedy.

Beware of Counterfeits!

The Crop Prospect.

We have never had more conflicting accounts of the coming grain crops, and of the prospects for fruit, than for this season. Still there is no doubt but that a late frosts injured, and in some places destroyed the cotton plant, and resowing was done; but in other and in wider sections, as we learn from gentlemen direct from the cotton States, the damage was inconsiderable. In those parts of the South devoted to grain the prospects are favorable, and on good land wheat is full of promise, especially in Kentucky. It is quite likely that the acreage is increased in many places, and we have most encouraging accounts from Knoxville and parts of middle Tennessee.

In the west the season is decidedly late but for the first time in two years there is an abundance of moisture. Up to the 10th of May only a little corn had been planted in the great central corn belt of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, but it is stated that the largest crop ever grown was planted after May 16th. In these sections the reports on fruit are decidedly at variance, even from the same localities.

For instance, in the accounts from southern Illinois, from Centralia to Mound City, embracing the great fruit, it was reported first that strawberries and peaches were all killed, and second, that enough buds remained alive to make as full a crop as will be profitable. We find adverse reports from St. Joseph on the east shore of Lake Michigan, but as yet no contradiction. From Delaware we have, by favor of Mr. D. S. Myer of Bridgeville, the following summary of the situation, which agrees in the main with other advices recently at hand:

"The peach buds went through the winter in perfect order, not hurt in the least in Sussex County, only slightly in upper Kent, but in and around Middletown—the great peach centre—the buds were nearly all killed. Since Spring opened we have had a number of frosts, doing considerable injury to certain varieties in bloom. Hale's Early are at least three-fourths killed at this point. Trott's Early and the Cramford's are considerably hurt. But without further frost or injury Sussex County and Kent County are good for two-thirds of a full crop, and all of the Peninsulas from two-to three and a half millions of baskets."

From reliable reports the peach crop in New Jersey will be a failure. The fruit buds were nearly all killed last Winter. This is particularly true around Morristown, Baskin Ridge, and through the south-eastern counties of the State.—Ex.

These stable instruments are not used as often and regularly as they should be by the generality of farmers. A good dressing down of the horse each morning with the currycomb and brush is fully equal in health giving power and elasticity of movement to two quarts of oats. It is a grateful attention, repaid many fold by the animal which is the stated recipient of it.

But, while bestowing this care upon the horse as most persons do, knowing its beneficial effects, they very generally seem to forget that oxen and cows are equally benefitted by a daily application of the card. There is no room for doubt on this subject with those who have been accustomed to bestow this attention on the dairy and working stock. A free use of the card gives repose to the animals, enables them to enjoy and digest their food in quiet instead of raking their bodies against posts, trees, and fences, as opportunity offers for allaying the irritation produced by an accumulation of dust, hay seed and other irritants common to the stable and barnyard. Even young colts, calves and yearlings are greatly benefitted by the use of the card, while its daily use is a step in the breaking or training process by which the service of animals are made more readily available when properly matured for labor.

It may seem absurd to scrub a fatuing porker, but those who have practiced it concur in its utility. One reason why hogs are fond of immersing themselves in pools of stagnant and filthy water is found in the fact that their bodies are encrusted with dirt, causing an itching which the pool they seek allays. This irritation renders them restless and retards the process of fattning very materially. This can be prevented by an application of soap suds, aided by a splint broom commonly used for cleaning stables and crosswalks. A liberal application of suds and a good scrubbing daily will allay irritation, and give that repose to the animals which is essential to a steady and rapid accumulation of flesh and fatty matter. The labor of preparing and applying the wash, at least once a day during the milder portions of the season, will be amply remunerated in the increased weight of the animals when the slaughtering season arrives.

Illustrious Examples.

It will be well for those modern husbandman who say they have no time to make notes of their operations, to consider that two American farmers, who must have been extreemly busy, had their fields numbered, and strict accounts kept of all crops for several years, and these men were George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. Of the two, perhaps, Jefferson made the greatest number of entries of work done and of crops produced; indeed no man living or dead ever paid a closer attention to the common affairs of life, or who, at the same time had a deeper interest in the welfare of mankind. We have seen a memorandum book kept by Jefferson when he was President and while he was in Philadelphia, in which entries were made of the day when every kind of vegetable came into market, and when it ceased coming, and there was various notes of the prices and qualities; and information regarding their culture. Only think of Gen. Grant paying attention to such things! We have seen another book of Jefferson's, making record of the meetings of the Board of Trustees of the University of Virginia for many years, recounting what each member said, and what was done, all in his own exceedingly condesended handwriting. There was a book of farm accounts relating to the Monticello farm, and which stated what actual work he himself did. It will hardly do to say that the man who wrote our Declaration of Independence did not know what he was about. Washington's farm accounts were full, and remarkably well kept, and the handwriting was more legible than that of almost any modern book keeper.—Ex.

The crop reports from 56 points along the line of the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad in Wiseonsin say that the prospects for wheat and other small grains were never better, and that wheat will average 20 bushels to the acre, and be of excellent quality. Harvesting has commenced. Sixteen points in Minnesota also give a satisfactory account of the coming harvest. Some points estimate the yield at 30 bushels to the acre.

In presenting my list of lands and other properties for sale, I would say that no section of the United States offers such inducements for capitalists and emigrants as this section of North Carolina. In longevity and healthfulness it will commare favorably with any where; and in easy and cheap transportation of products to market, in pleasantness of climate, in the sociability of the people, in great fertility and durability of soil, no section can equal it.

A railroad will soon be built to Norfolk, putting this place in direct communication by Rail, with the whole United States. This, together with our great fishing, farming and manufacturing interests, and certain early completion of already projected works of improvement for putting in nearer, cheaper and easier communication with the Ocean, will render this one of the most important commercial, and manufacturing points on the Southern country.

The lot contains about two acres of land, and the buildings consist of a fair dwelling three stories high, containing eight rooms, all in good order, another two story building with four rooms and pantries, dairy, smokehouses, stables, &c. The dwelling has a good cellar under it. There is room on the front lot to erect two good stores, and they would occupy the best stand in the town for merchandize.

A farm of 700 acres in Pasquotank County 10 miles from town, with fine two story dwelling, large barn, kitchen and other outhouses; as also, two other dwellings, barns and other houses at different points on the farm. This farm is all cleared but 150 acres, is free from swamps and other waste land, and is well adapted to raising corn, wheat, cotton, oats, &c. The price is 14,000 in easy payments.

A farm of 500 acres in Pasquotank County, 6 miles from town, and one mile from the River, with good new dwelling built in modern style, barn, stables, four tenant houses scattered over the farm, fine water, &c. This farm is situated on the most public road in the County, has 300 acres cleared and balance in splendid pine, oak, cypress, maple, sweet gum, and other valuable timber. It is peculiarly adapted to raising cotton, $50 per acre, and having been realized on a part of it this year in cotton. It also grows corn, wheat, oats, and other crops well. Price $12,000 in easy payments.

A valuable vacant lot in the town of E. City containing a half square, on the principal street in the town immediately opposite Court House quare. Has an iron fence in front, fine shrubbery, and is near the large new Hotel justerected. Price $2,000 in easy payments.

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent. clause, we publish the following extracts from the Act:

The second clause of the thirty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor, and who shall have proved their claims, filed in the case at or before the time of hearing of the application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provision of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27th, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which the bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1868.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of all his debts, before he can obtain a discharge as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent. of the amount of the debts.

1. That he owes as principal;

2. That have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy; and

3. That he has contracted since the 31st day of December, 1867.

Or, if a majority in number and value of those who have proved their debts, to whom the bankrupt is indebted as principal, on debts contracted subsequent to Dec. 31, 1867, consent in writing to the discharge, such bankrupt may be discharged forever from all his debts.

If a debtor, owing three thousand dollars principal, twenty five hundred of which indebtedness was contracted prior to January 1, 1868, and five hundred subsequent to that time, files his petition in bankruptcy, and all his creditors prove against him, and there are no assets in the hands of the assignee, the petitioner will be entitled to a discharge; but it will be a bar only to the debts contracted prior to January 1, 1868.—If no creditors prove, the discharge will be good against all debts, whether contracted before or after January 1, 1868.

The practical effect in bankruptcy cases generally is, that creditors fail to prove their debts, finding it ordinarily unprofitable. They have had, in a large majority of instances, heretofore the trouble and expense of making proofs, without receiving any return. The 50 per cent. bugbear, therefore when viewed in the light of the law and common-sense, disappears.

EXEMPTIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

The exemptions under the 14th section of the Bankrupt Act are as follows:

1. Household and Kitchen furniture to an amount not exceeding $500.00

2. Wearing apparel of Bankrupt and family.

3. Uniform, &c., if he has been a soldier in the United State's Army.

4. Personal property of the value of $500.00 to be selected by the Bankrupt.

5. A Homestead and the dwelling and buildings used therewith, not exceeding in value the sum of $1000.00; or in lieu thereof, any lot in any city, town or village not exceeding in value the sum of $1000.000.

6. The reversionary interest in the Homestead lands.

In laying off the Exemptions in some Districts, the Assignees are ordered to accept and abide by, any assignment of a homestead which has been made by a Sheriff under the State laws; or which has been assigned upon the application of a debtor in accordance with the laws of North Carolina. Where no such assignment of homestead has been made, the assignee will proceed to set apart such homestead, and make the other exemptions according to the rules of the bankrupt Court.

The report of such exemptions when made by the assignee can be excepted to by the bankrupt or by any creditor, within twenty days after the allotment of such exempt property.

EFFECT OF THE DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY UPON JUDGMENT.

It is the opinion of many of our best lawyers that the discharge in bankruptcy, discharges judgment debts existing against the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, and that therefore the liens existing by virtue of such judgments, upon homesteads are wiped out, and cannot afterwards be enforced. In fine, that the practical effect of the discharge, is to leave a man, whose homestead was encumbered by judgments, free from all his debts, of every nature, and the owner in fee simple of such homestead.

Again many lawyers, equally prominent in the profession, are of opinion that such will not be the effect of the discharge. That the homestead, will still be liable under the judgments and that when it determines under our State laws, the judgment creditor may enforce his lien and collect his debts.

To place this matter beyond doubt, the following rule has been adopted for the benefit of petitioners who are not willing to run any risk.

That the petitioning debtor may file his petition in the District Court, addressed to Hon. Geo. W. Brooks, asking that the judgment creditor, or creditors, show cause why the liens existing in pursuance of their judgments should not be adjusted by said court, and their present value ascertain and fixed, and the amount when so ascertained, to be made the true value of such lien or liens by the decree or judgment of said District Court, in bankruptcy.

The right to adjust such liens, is exercised in pursuance of Sec. 1. of the Bankrupt Act.

The Petitions and Schedules must be in duplicate. Petitioner should sign each sheet, except oath to schedules. It is not necessary to file sheets of schedules that are not used. All papers in bankruptcy must be sworn to before a Register in Bankruptcy, U. S. Commissioner, or Clerk of the court.
